

I recently became an XM subscriber due to the poor quality of broadcast radio stations and what they offer. I don't want to listen to incessant blabber from all the morning radio stations on my way to work. The stations have non-stop commercials and very little music. The reception is terrible at best. I feel that because I pay a monthly subscription I should be able to receive the high quality and variety that XM offers. I also don't feel that the NAB has any right to tell me what I have to listen to. I would certainly hope that the FCC soundly reject petition 04-160 and in doing so sends a clear message that people have the right to listen to what they want.
